SEMINARS SEMINAIRES

ENERGY SEMINAR

A new CERN Seminar will start soon. It is dedicated to the study of energy problems in a wide sense (energy sources, energy use and needs, energy savings, transmission and distribution, new and old technologies, environmental consequences, etc).

This Seminar will be run on two levels, the "technical" and the "general" level.

The Technical Seminars will take place on Wednesdays at 16.00 hrs (16.30 hrs in winter) in the Theory Conference Room (Lab.4); in these Seminars, data, procedures, theories and technologies will be presented and discussed in their proper technical language.

The General Seminars will be integrated into the CERN Colloquium series and take place on Tuesdays and/or Thursdays (exceptionally on other days) at 16.00 hrs (16.30 hrs in winter) in the CERN Auditorium. Contrary to the Technical Seminars, these General Seminars are intended for a larger audience and an effort will be made to make them self-contained and intelligible to listeners without technical or scientific training.

Energy Seminars will be announced in the Weekly Bulletin with an indication "technical" or "general".

(Note that the CERN Colloquium by B.J. Mason on "Man's influence on weather and climate" on Friday, June 3rd belongs already to the new series.)
