ACADEMIC TRAINING at 11.00 hrs - Auditorium

"Statistical analysis and representation of counted data"
by J. Friedman / Stanford University and CERN

Abstract : Useful techniques for the statistical analysis and presentation of high energy particle physics data are described and discussed. The purpose of these lectures is to acquaint physicists with a variety of techniques for presenting and making statistical inferences from counted data. Those methods that are familiar to particle physicists are discussed within the general framework of statistical data analysis, and some new potentially useful techniques are described.
