Philibert Secretan

THE RATIONAL UNIVERSAL AND THE HUMAN COMMUNITY

Philibert Secretan, was born in 1926. He read philosophy and political sciences at Strasbourg, Saarbrücken and Geneva, taking a doctorate in philosophy. He is teaching at the Collège Calvin and at the University of Fribourg.

As a member of the Faculty of Theology at Fribourg, he became especially interested in the "scientific nature" of theology, i.e. in the variations throughout history of concepts like "reason", "science", "experience", etc. He had already become aware, through his work in political philosophy ("Truth and Power", "Authority, Power, Might"), of the difficulties encountered in reconciling reason and power, either in a non-practical political theory, or in a political action which aims at expressing its own theory.

One aspect of the difficulties met with in a philosophy of rationality is implied in the presentation of reason as a universal. Whether what is considered in the technical-scientific universal, the historical universal (regarded by Hegel as the "concrete universal") or the ethical universal (even the Rights of Man), the following question invariably arises : "Does this universal not always by-pass the concrete singular and its 'difference' ?" "Does the universal not, in the end, always remain abstract ?"

The search for the universal is nonetheless just as legitimate as that for the singular. How can they be reconciled ? In the lecturer's view there is, in the concept of "Catholicity" -- even as it is seen outside the faith and the church referred to as Catholic -- another principle of universality which, like Pascal, we may term "heart" or "love". Against the dialectics which, with numerous variants, is ruled by the principle of reason, is set a philosophy of analogy, or analectics, which can be explained in the context of a theory of the universal which assumes the richness of the particular without detracting from it. Such a theory must be proof not against the actions and methods of reason and understanding, but against reason's claim to raise its status to that of a principle of the universal.

The need for this change of view is particularly evident in politics, where universal reason is easily translated into totalitarianism and imperialism and where a critical way of thinking, itself nothing more than another expression of reason, is not enough.

The lecturer should not be expected to reply to all the questions which his research has led him to ask.

The lecture will be given in French, with simultaneous interpretation into English.
