

A basic knowledge of GKS will be assumed, and whilst there will be some overlap with the material presented in the introductory GKS course, emphasis will be placed on the more advanced aspects, including workstations control, advanced use of attributes, transformations, level c input, and more on the use of segments. All these subjects will be explained with the help of example programs which will be developed interactively by the participants. Thus, it will be possible immediately to put into practice what has been learnt. An overview will also be given of the various support facilities available at CERN (documentation, libraries and include files, description of devices available, plotting commands including the use of SGML, and an introduction to higher-level products, such as GKSPACK, HPLOT, etc.)

Register: For practical reasons the number of participants will be limited to sixteen. If you want to attend this series you should discuss the matter with your direct supervisor, and if he/she agrees send an electronic mail message to INFOTUTO@CERNVM, indicating your preferred electronic mail address.

Requirements: A working knowledge of Fortran is essential, as is some experience in the use of basic graphics, including GKS.

Lecturers: Ian McLaren is a member of the Graphics Section in the User Support group in DD Division. He is involved mainly in providing support for GKS and hardcopy devices on the central IBM service.
Jan Moebes is a Professor at Krefeld University (FRG) and has a long experience in teaching graphics to students. While working at CERN on a sabbatical he developed a GKS graphics editor, based on a program originally by W. Wojcik of IN2P3, and this will be used extensively during the course.
David Myers is head of the Graphics Section. He was involved in the UA1/UA2 MERLIN graphics project, and is a member of several ISO Working Groups involved in the development various graphics standards, including PHIGS.
